P. Samar and starring Sandra Bullock, G raldine Chaplin, Courtenay Taylor and Kiefer Sutherland. It was shot in France, Mexico and the United States. The film is based on Iphigenia Among the Taurians by the ancient Greek author Euripides, and was released by Paramount Pictures on April 15, 2004. Plot In 490 BC, Iphigenia is granted clemency by King Agamemnon to return home to the island of Tauris in the Aegean Sea. Her sister, Electra, refuses to come because she has fallen in love with Achilles, the half-brother of Agamemnon's lover, Neoptolemus. Meanwhile, her mother Clytemnestra is scheming to get her baby daughter back from the Greek army. In order for Iphigenia to return home, Clytemnestra plots to get her killed by sacrificing her as a burnt offering in the temple of Artemis in Phocis. Upon her arrival home, she is torn between the two countries, between love and duty, and between doing what is right for her people and doing what is right for the person she loves. Cast Sandra Bullock as Iphigenia G raldine Chaplin as Antigone Courtenay Taylor as Clytemnestra Kiefer Sutherland as Agamemnon Paul Adelstein as Achilles Peter Adderton as Electra Carlos Garza as Phocion Michael Nyqvist as Arestor Robin Davies as Euripides Allison Flueger as Helena Nathalie Lenoir as Clytemnestra Benjamin Magill as Athene Production Development In 1997, Sandra Bullock signed to star in, produce, and write the screenplay for a remake of John Derek's The Last Days of Grumman (1966). She based the character on Iphigenia and won the Academy Award for Best Actress. It was never made, and the film's screenwriter, Wes Strickland, went on to become the director of the 1998
